D&B Failure Score Interpretation

D&B Failure Score is Dun & Bradstreet's risk assessment score for China market. D&B Failure Score establishes a scientific statistical analysis model by studying the regularity of a large amount of data. D&B Failure Score is used to predict the probability that an entity will be deregistered or revoked in next 12 months.

D&B Failure Score is initially rolled out in January 2023. In order to objectively and consistently assess enterprise risk, Dun & Bradstreet combines a large amount of business information, expert analysis and statistical analysis techniques under the framework of Dun & Bradstreet's global model development methodology, and analyzes and verified the data samples of millions of Chinese enterprises. The D&B Failure Score of China not only conforms to the consistency of the global D&B Failure Score logic, but also applies to the risk assessment of Chinese enterprises. The validity and accuracy of the score will be evaluated and verified annually based on changes in the actual economic environment and risks, and the logic of the score may be fine-tuned to ensure that the score meets Dun & Bradstreet scoring standards and requirements.

When using this score to make decisions about a company, Dun & Bradstreet recommends that you combine your D&B Failure Score with the specific circumstances of your customer base to establish a risk score that is appropriate for your company. For a company with a high-risk score for D&B Failure Score, it does not mean that trading with the company will necessarily incur risk.
